2F AROUND THE HOUSE

Sweet dreams are made of greens

If sleeping on your six-pack holds little appeal, think again. Natural Elements is a new line of bed pillows made with post-consumer recycled green soda bottles, up to 40 per pillow. The plastic bottles — which otherwise would languish in a landfill for hundreds of years — are spun into a lofty fiber, and the pillow is encased in an unbleached, undyed cotton shell. The pillows are made by Hollander Home Fashions, which makes one-third of all pillows produced in the United States. Look for them at Marshalls, TJ Maxx and Home Goods from $9.99 to $19.99.
